

Uvbie language

Uvbie (Uvwie, Evrie, or Evhro) is a Niger Congo language spoken by the Uvwie people of southern Nigeria. It is classified alongside Urhobo, Okpe, Isoko and Eruwa as co-ordinate members of South-western Edoid branch of Proto Edoid language^[3] spoken by the Uvwie people of southern Nigeria.

Phonology

The phonemic inventory of Uvwie, amongst other things, consists of seven vowels.^[4] Although earlier studies identified nine vowels in two harmonic sets, /i e a o u/ and /ɪ ε ə ɔ ʊ/.^{[5][6]}

The consonant system is somewhat conservative, and nearly the same as that of Urhobo. The only significant differences are the loss of ϕ , χ , and of the distinction between l and n: these alternate, depending on whether the following vowel is oral or nasal. /r, ʊ, j, w/ also have nasal allophones before nasal vowels.
